

Your Wedding Story

CLIENT WELCOME PACKET

with love from Studio Nine Productions

WELCOME

Thank you for choosing Studio Nine to be part of your story—we're genuinely honoured to be on this journey with you. Our bespoke wedding mini-mag isn't just design; it's a heartfelt tribute to your day, crafted so you and your guests will be talking about it for years. We take real pride in being a small part of something so big, and we care fiercely about the tiny details: the look in the doorway, the line in your vows, the joke that only your friends will get. We gather those moments and set them on the page so you can reminisce, smile, and feel proud to show your story to the people you love.

This is the one time you get to plan your day to the letter—choosing your pages, shaping your tone, and telling your love story exactly as it felt. We'll guide you with gentle expertise, curate your photos, polish your words, and make each spread feel unmistakably "you." Our promise as a company is simple: to create a truly bespoke experience and a beautiful keepsake you can enjoy on repeat—today, next week, and every anniversary after. We can't wait to begin.

with love xoxo

OUR COUPLES STORY

Sarah didn't mean to take Sam's umbrella. It was one of those sideways May downpours, the café doorway jammed with people doing that polite shuffle. She grabbed the nearest navy brolly, got three steps out, and heard, "Sorry—that's mine."

She turned, mortified. He had rain-flattened hair and an easy grin. "Borrow it," he said, stepping beside her. "Plenty of room." They walked to the bus stop, both a bit awkward, both a bit relieved not to be soaked.

They compared small things first. Lemon drizzle over brownies. Trainers that only saw daylight for Parkrun once a month. She liked old postcards because the handwriting felt like a time capsule; he bought records at charity shops because he liked the sleeves as much as the songs. The bus didn't come. They finished their coffee under the shop awning and, before they split, swapped Instagrams because it felt normal and low-pressure.

He messaged that evening: "I owe you a dry walk. Saturday market?"

They met by the fruit stall, shared a paper bag of doughnuts, and did a loop of the park when the rain held off. Their early dates were practical and ordinary—films with the good seats, a pub quiz where they came fifth, a pottery class where both bowls collapsed by minute twelve. It never felt like auditioning. It felt like slotting someone into the week you already had.

They learned the useful stuff. Sarah needs ten minutes' quiet after work before she can talk. Sam hates coriander but will eat around it. She keeps lists; he keeps spare chargers. Neither of them cares about grand gestures; both of them like having plans for Sunday morning.

A year in, they were looking at flats "just to see," and then, suddenly, measuring the awkward alcove for shelves. On a cold Saturday, carrying paint samples and sausage rolls, they cut through the park. He stopped by the bandstand, not dramatic, just certain, and said, "This is the right person, isn't it?" He took a ring from his pocket—nothing flashy, just exactly her—and asked if they could keep doing life the way they'd started: honest, simple, together.

Later, when people asked what made it work, they both said the same thing:

"It always felt easy to come back to each other."

BRIDESMAIDS

Bridesmaids: Sue, Anne & Cheryl

Sue, Anne and Cheryl have been Sarah's constants since school—three brilliant threads woven through every season. Sue is the organiser: colour-coded calendars, emergency plasters, and a sixth sense for when the bride needs a snack or a breather. Anne is the heart-on-sleeve cheerleader, the first to cry happy tears and the last to leave the dance floor; she brings the big laughter and the bigger hugs. Cheryl is calm-in-a-storm: steady hands for tiny buttons, perfect eyeliner wings, and a knack for turning nerves into excitement.

Together they've revised for exams, swapped jeans and secrets, moved flats in the rain, and perfected the group chat that never sleeps. On wedding morning, they'll arrive with coffee, playlists and a little box of "just in case"—hairpins, tissues, good luck charms. They know Sarah's stories, and she knows theirs; today they stand beside her not just as bridesmaids, but as home.

SPEECH QUOTES

“From sticker books to stationery lists, Sarah has always been prepared—today she found the one thing you can’t plan: a man who meets her in the rain with a two-person umbrella.” father of the bride

THE STORY BEGINS

If you care about the story behind your photos, this mini-mag is for you. It suits couples who want guests to feel included, not just impressed—people who love clear, tidy keepsakes, blended-family sensitivity, and a record of the small things: nicknames, in-jokes, the song you nearly picked. You choose the sections and we shape them into something that reads beautifully—calm, fun, or quietly classic—so it's practical on the day (introduces the crew, timings, menu) and meaningful after (a thank-you worth keeping). Private QR options let you share the gallery or playlist without blasting it online. Hand a copy to grandparents, send the digital version to friends who couldn't travel, and pop one in your memory box. Simple, thoughtful, and unmistakably yours.

WHO YOU ARE

Tell us the basics (names as printed, date, venue) and the little things that feel “so you.” This helps us make the magazine sound like your voices.

WHEN IS YOUR MAGAZINE BEING MADE FOR?

On-the-day table favours or a post-wedding thank-you keepsake? Tell us your timeline so we plan drafts, edits, and print perfectly.

WHAT IS YOUR WEDDING STYLE?

Romantic, fun, minimal, editorial—or a mix? Share colours, textures, and any motifs (flowers, venue sketch, song lyric) you'd love woven in.

WHAT MATTERS MOST TO YOU?

People, party, design details, or the story itself? Note your top priorities (and any must-include pages) so we focus the mag where it counts.

YOUR WEDDING MAGAZINE

Your magazine is 20 pages total.

2 pages are the Front Cover and Back Cover (already included).

➡ Please tick up to 18 more pages to fill the mag.

Notes:

Items marked (2pp) use 2 pages; (4pp) use 4 pages.

FAQS

CATEGORY

HOW DOES IT WORK AND HOW LONG DOES IT TAKE?

Once we have your photos and page choices, you'll get a first draft in 5-7 working days. Classic includes one edit round before print; Signature includes two and a studio interview + written feature. Print (if chosen) typically takes 10-20 working days after sign-off.

CATEGORY

WHAT'S INCLUDED - AND WHAT COSTS EXTRA?

Your classic package covers design & curation of a 20-page mini-mag. Printing is optional and billed separately at trade rates. Need more space? Magazines print in sets of four—add pages in +4 page bundles for an additional fee. We have a signature range and additional extras you can include (see our packages)

CATEGORY

WHAT DO WE NEED FROM THE WEDDING COUPLE?

A gallery of 200-400 final images (we curate), your page selections, names/roles, vows/excerpts, menu/supplier credits, and any must-include details. We'll always credit your photographer as supplied and respect any privacy preferences (e.g., first names only, no children's surnames). This document is yours alone, it won't be sold by us or used as promotional material unless signed off by all parties.

KEEP IN TOUCH

Thank you again for trusting Studio Nine with your story. To keep in touch, simply drop us a line whenever you have updates—new photos, page choices, song lists, speeches, or tiny details you'd love us to weave in. Share your gallery link when it's ready, and feel free to tag us when you post sneak peeks. After the wedding, tell us your favourite moments and any guest reactions—we love those. We're here for reprints, anniversary add-ons, or future celebrations too
